[Translation not in the OCR viewer]This woman may have been killed by her ex-boyfriend in an 'honour' killing Posted: 2 Oct 2019 | Last Updated: 3 Oct 2019 A 20-year-old woman may have been killed by her own father in an 'honour' killing, which is a term used to describe the killing of a female by family members who think the woman has brought shame to her family. On 19 May 2019, a 20-year-old woman was allegedly murdered in her own house in Zirakpur, Punjab, India. According to reports, the woman was reportedly killed by her father (the victim's brother) after she left her home on 11 May and ran away to live with her husband. The woman's husband said that he was told that the victim had “gotten into a dispute with her father” about the latter’s refusal to grant them permission to be married. He added that after the incident took place, his wife was sent back to their house, and he was told that she would be killed if he ever tries to see her again. The husband, however, managed to contact the police and inform them about his wife’s death. According to The Hindu newspaper, the Punjab police has now announced a reward of Rs 25,000 for any information that leads to the arrest and conviction of the killer. The police also said that they will investigate the murder using DNA and other DNA-based techniques. Other sources, such as DNA India, suggest that the murder may have been motivated by honour. It is thought that the victim’s father may have killed her to prevent her from being with her husband, and that the husband was unaware of the crime when he was told of her death. If this is true, then honour killings may be happening in Punjab in India, with the killing of women by their own family members being well-known in that part of the world.
